The game screen is made using Estro, a member of the Estro Society. I think Estro and the other members, who made the game screen, successfully put their passion and personal efforts in display. The game screen is so impressive, through it, the player does not even notice the difference between Estro and Japanese games. The strength of this game lies in the feeling of not having to calculate special techniques and the possibility to grind the game to find all solutions. As a new fantasy action RPG, it is highly likely that you will die in the first several hours. Furthermore, the game offers an infinite number of solutions that can be used. In addition, you can strengthen your characters at any time. However, this game has a "broken world" countermeasure. I think it is very important that you have fun with the story by yourself after all. There are many good points in it. However, there is even a risk that you start to hate the story without any point in the game after all. If I'm in a time like that, I will go back to the world of peace. Hope you will enjoy it as well! (Last Updated on January 27, 2018)
