First and most important, replacing the entire engine/transmission is $13,000 at the engine rebuild center. If it was inexpensive to do that - you are mistaken. They cannot do that if you do not have the engine compartment clean and free from all foreign materials. When the engine is rebuilt, all of the things you removed will go in and if needed, they will replace what you put in a list. It is $6,000 for the seal replacement on the jet fan. Then there is the expansion core for all of the engines - $2,000 a cylinder. Then there is the electric manifold, wiring harness, starter, starter motor, bolts, new gaskets and coolant lines. There is more, but I think you get the idea. This is the only engine and transmission rebuild center in the country. They are paid professionals, not hobbyists. Best of luck and please discuss your purchase with them because they are a good source for you. They have the best quality parts, greatest customer service and a wealth of knowledge. I don't understand why you are saying the engine would cost $13,000, that is the only part you need and it is the cheapest part and their service is not that expensive. You don't need a rebuild when you change a head gasket and seal the combustion chamber. I didn't say to put the old engine back in you can use a recycled engine. I said to use it as a donor engine. If you want to put the new engine in a new engine compartment it can be done but it will take a professional mechanic. The seal is easy to replace but it is a very expensive repair because of the labor. It will cost
