Tmpgenc Authoring Works 5 Crack 5.0.8.26.Over the past several years, Houston police have arrested more people on marijuana charges than any other city in Texas. But that's all about to change. Texas' lowest level of marijuana offense, a Class B misdemeanor punishable by up to a $500 fine, is to be removed from the books in 2014. It's the reason why there aren't more charges filed on cannabis possession cases in Texas. Because it's already legal for adults to possess up to an ounce of marijuana, there's no reason to take it to court. Instead, courts hand down a small fine and send people on their way. But there's a problem. The number of misdemeanor marijuana possession cases filed in Houston has remained pretty consistent. If it's going to change, it's up to the Harris County District Attorney's office to file less cases. In 2012, the DA's office only filed 10-15 cases. Last year, the number was between 20 and 25. And this year, so far, there has been 17 cases filed. A spokesman for the Harris County District Attorney's office says it's about the docket. "We conduct a review and if it is determined not to warrant a criminal charge, we will decline to prosecute," says Rich Orshan. "If it is determined to be a prosecutable case we will file it." Orshan says it also depends on resources, and with the number of cases it brings to court, the DA's office loses money. "I don't think it's been all that difficult to make the decision to decline prosecution," he says. But in the last two years, the DA's office has received some help. Texas' new medical marijuana law went into effect last summer. It allows patients with certain diseases like cancer and epilepsy to receive legal, medical marijuana. More than 1000 doctors around the state have signed-up to provide medicinal pot under the program. That's allowed patients to avoid the misdemeanor offense. But it's also allowed the medical marijuana dispensaries to hire guards to protect their facilities. And guard business is booming. The guards often need to spend hours on duty. "It is costing us
